General Modifiers

These modifiers are common enough to keep in a simple reference here rather than copy out into every relevant entry in the Bestiary.

Decaying

- Decaying Monsters generally move jerkily and suddenly. They may talk, but talk in unconnected fragments that make no sense. They all have the same effects:
  - Technophobia all Decaying creatures will prioritise targets displaying complex technology
  - Unharvestable all Decaying creatures all PING to HARVEST
  - Brittle all Decaying creatures die immediately upon losing all of their hits and shatter into rusty dust
  - Always PING Drain.

Big

Last update: 2022/01/09 20:01

- Big creatures are lumbering and tough, and generally resistant to being pulled around. They generally have the following effects:
  - Sturdy always call PING to STRIKEDOWN
  - Heavy always take PUSH and PULL for 5m instead of the full length

Inorganic

- Inorganic entities are particularly susceptible to electrical effects.
- Inorganic creatures take BURN at 5s but ZAP at 10s.

Programmed

- Programmed entities usually inorganic follow a set of rules to the letter.
- These should generally be made obvious to the Monster playing them.

Static

- Static entities cannot move of their own volition. They may usually still rotate.
- Take STRIKEDOWN, PUSH, or PULL as BREAK.

Composite

• This Monster is a big Monster made of several components. The creature should stay broadly together and have behaviour defined if one part gets destroyed.

Ruthless

• This Monster can and will call EXECUTE on downed players with 10s of roleplay.

Amorphous

- This monster is made up of some largely undifferentiated parts e.g a swarm of insects, a slime creature, nanite goop
- Freely PING STRIKEDOWN, PULL, and BREAK,
- Take PUSH at 5m rather than ten
- Collapse into a pile of gloop after 30s downed (i.e. can't be HARVESTed or scanned unless done quickly)
