

Specialist

In the great vastness of space an awful lot of expertise is needed. Specialists are those who find themselves simply never satisfied unless they can know, make, or tinker with more, and will go through any means to do so. Engineers apply their knowledge to create and modify complicated systems both of hardware and software. Operatives, meanwhile, encompass those determined to lift information by any means, and often find themselves slipping into secure places to sate their curiosity. Scientists prefer to discover how the world works and experiment with what is known to find out what is not.
